Module 12: Assignment 6: Create Your Online Store

<https://tolkientreasures.my-online.store/>

During the process of building Tolkien Treasures, I have discovered many things. The first and most important one is how much work going into creating a store. The amount of time and planning just to research the audience of your products and how best to interact with them, whether that be advertisements or certain platforms to be present on, was more than I expected it to be. Determining the type of advertisements to use (based on audience) was another somewhat challenging task because if this project were to become a fully fleshed out business, I would have to consider the cost of the advertisements into my budget. I think advertisements are one of the most important aspects of running a business, but I do not know if there are any specific aspects that are the most important to set up. I think that every aspect of the business is important in its own way. Without advertisements you will not get business, but if you do not have products, prices, descriptions, or shipping costs already planned, there is no need to send users to your shop. One of the most important things, though, I think was gathering the images of the products. I personally would not buy something without having a picture, so I wanted to make sure I picked the best images that showcased as much detail of the product as possible. Having social media, I do not think is one of the most important things, but I do believe that without implementing it, your business could be missing out on reaching a greater audience. The most challenging aspect I think was creating a privacy policy. There are so many things that need to be covered in a policy since there are a plethora of different scenarios that can happen. Another challenging thing would be to connect the items on the store to all the social media that are on the store's platform. There is a way to connect the items on your website to your social media account, but it would still be a full-time job to keep everything up-to-date and accurate across the platforms. On my website, I added Search Engine Optimization, page descriptions, and keywords to my pages so it can be found easier by search engines. On my products, I added search tags to allow the products to be pulled if they are searched in the search bar. I made sure that each product had options when they needed to have options, whether it be for the clothing size, shoe size, or ring size. I also added a favicon for the browser tab. Additionally, I added alternative description labels to my images to make them accessibility friendly. Finally, I created Facebook and Instagram page shells and connected them to my website in the built-in footer. While there is not anything on them currently, if this were to become fleshed out, I could add the content in. I do wish that freewebstore had the option to create batch product listings (example: if you are selling ten rings, drop them into the "New Product" section and be able to create all ten product displays at once, but I also see where it may cause some confusion or trouble. That was not necessarily a 'difficult' part for me, but it was the most time-consuming part of creating the website itself. I could not image having to upload many items initially into your new store (unless you had a friend or business partner to help you). Another challenging aspect was posting the live link for friends and family to go through and find all its flaws and report back to me so that I could fix it. While some of the issues found were a little embarrassing (forgetting size charts, accidentally turning off reviews, etc.) it was nice to have a fresh set of eyes to look over the site and find ways to improve the user experience. Another small challenge was figuring out why my business email was not working. As it turned out I had a typo in the html of my email address in the footer. Luckily my sister discovered it after sending a test email that I never received. Other friends reported back items not appearing when they typed in certain key words, which I was able to go in and fix that so those items would appear in future searches. Overall, I had a fun time creating my business and building the website for it. I learned a lot about running your own business and have decided I probably will not own my own business considering how much work it takes to start and keep up with the initial cost and labor.
